

GENERAL LAWTON ARRIVES HERE FROM SANTIAGO.

Reaches This Port on the Transport Michigan in a Storm.

CUBANS ARE WITH US.

He Says Insurgent Troops Are Disbanding and Returning to Work.

HELD COUNCIL WITH GARCIA.

Three Heroes of the Battle of Santiago.

GENERAL LAWTON returned yesterday on the transport Michigan. He is here on a sixty-day leave. The bodies of Colonel Wikoff and Captain Wetherill were brought home on the Michigan for burial in their native soil. On board the transport were also the bodies of Privates Skinner and Cheever, of the Seventy-first New York, two other

The transport Michigan arrived at Quarantine late Tuesday night, but owing to the storm that prevailed the vessel could not be boarded. The steamer General Meigs, of the Quartermaster's Department, with the wife of General Lawton on board, went down the bay to meet the transport and returned to pier No. 3, East River. It was 8 o'clock yesterday morning when the Meigs went down the bay to meet the transport again. The Michigan had remained at the Quarantine station over night.

Dr. Doty, the Health Officer of the port, visited the ship about 6 o'clock yesterday morning and as she only had two sick men on board the transport proceeded to her anchorage off Liberty Island. The Meigs then came alongside and was made fast. The storm still raged and a heavy rain fell for two hours.

General Lawton's wife, accompanied by Lieutenant-Colonel George E. Albee, U. S. A., retired, stood on the deckhouse of the Meigs in the downpour and welcomed her husband. In about an hour the storm had subsided sufficiently to allow General Lawton to board the ship.

General Lawton is home on a sixty-day leave. "I am feeling fifty per cent better since I got in this cooler climate," was his first remark after he landed. "I look upon the situation in eastern Cuba as being very satisfactory. The people generally are getting back to work, and the business men are resuming their operations. The sanitary condition of Santiago has been much improved. The water system is better now than ever before, and the sewage system never so good. General Wood has done remarkably good work in every way. The health of the city has improved since he took charge of affairs. The receipts of the Custom House reached as high as $250,000 in one month.

"The Cuban army is gradually disintegrating, and the men are going back to work. There are, I believe, a few disaffected elements, but the percentage of these is small. The great majority of the men and many of the officers with whom I have come in contact seem to be satisfied with the present condition of affairs.

"I saw General Garcia and had a talk with him. My impression is that he and other Cuban officers whom I met are satisfied with the existing condition of affairs. Some of them feel that they are ready to govern themselves now, but I think this opinion is confined to a few. The Cubans have an army now, and that is the great trouble.

"The American Volunteers, who acted as interpreters for General Lawton, while in Cuba, was introduced to the reporters by the general. Captain Mendoza is a Cuban by birth, but is a naturalized American citizen. At the outbreak of the war he was one of those who placed his services at the disposal of the United States Government. He was attached to the staff of General Lawton, and his services were so valuable that he was promoted to the rank of Captain on August 15, on the recommendation of General Lawton.

"The Cuban soldiers are anxious to get to work," said Captain Mendoza. "They are many soldiers and captains and generals in the Cuban army, and they all accept the situation. Some officers think it is just that they should be paid, that is, the soldiers should. The men think the United States should guarantee this payment. Many of them are willing to act as Cuban militia, and be mustered out at any time the United States Government decides upon such a course. I have spoken to members of the Cuban Government, and find that they merely want the American Government to establish the stable Government promised by the United States Congress. Many Cubans who favored Cuban independence at first now accept the situation.

"The bodies of Colonel Charles A. Wikoff, of the Twenty-second Infantry, who was slain by a bullet in the forehead at San Juan Hill on July 1; Captain Alexander M. Wetherill, of the Sixth Infantry, and Private Louis N. Skinner, of Company B, and William E. Cheever, of Company

Broker's Love Brought Him to Court.

Magistrate Wentworth, in Yorkville Police Court, yesterday, advised Broker Mills to take soothing syrup, which, the Magistrate believed, might cure the pangs of love which were so overpowering that Mr. Mills, it is alleged, persisted in annoying Miss Garraway. She did not reciprocate, and had him summoned to court.

CHILDISH HOMAGE TO LAFAYETTE.

Exercises in the Public Schools in Memory of the French Patriot.

YORKTOWN'S ANNIVERSARY Day, on Which Cornwallis Surrendered Set Apart in America as "Lafayette Day."

In every public school in Greater New York yesterday the last hour of the afternoon session was devoted to the discussion of Lafayette. For the first time in school history a foreign hero was made the incentive for patriotic exercises.

October 19, the anniversary of the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, was decided upon by the Lafayette Memorial Commission, some time ago, as the most appropriate date in the calendar for "Lafayette Day." Through Walter H. Butler, acting as special representative, it was brought before the Board of Education. The plan of the Commission, which proposes to unveil a Lafayette monument in Paris on United States Day, at the exposition of 1900, was that the heads of institutions should be asked to appoint committees from their students to arrange and carry out public exercises embracing, perhaps, historical drama, patriotic orations, etc. For this entertainment they were asked to charge an admission fee, or to make a general collection, thus raising the funds necessary for the erection of a monument over the forgotten grave of Lafayette, in the garden of the convent of the Petit Plopin, Paris.

Superintendent Jasper said yesterday that while the Board had passed a resolution authorizing "Lafayette Day," and recommending the principals of the schools to devote an hour of the school session to the memory of the life and services of the gallant Frenchman, his by-laws would not allow a collection to be taken up among the school children in this city.

"While it is fitting that the people of the United States honor the memory of Lafayette," said Superintendent Skinner, "the proposition to ask contributions of the school children for this purpose is not approved."

At Columbia University Lafayette Day was celebrated by a lecture in the Schermerhorn building, by Professor Robinson, of the Chair of History.

Colonel W. D. H. Washington, vice-president of the Lafayette Society of France and the United States, called to the guests at the inaugural dinner of the society yesterday, at the Hotel Continental, Paris, the following:

"Many patriotic societies in America send fraternal greeting. Vive Lafayette."

He Knew Glance Was Dead. Colonel Miles and Chief of Police Nasser, of Yorktown, questioned yesterday, the five Italians under arrest for the murder of Giuseppe Glance, who was buried in the woods near Yorktown, Virginia, where he was living, and father told us if we did not like it we could get out.

"This we did. We went to live with friends, and father at once notified President Hallock, of the Pasadena Society for the Suppression of Crime, that we were bad girls and needed looking after. Mr. Hallock investigated us, found that we had been slandered and so reported to our father.

"Then we went to San Francisco, where a friend named Merrick took care of us, and wrote to our uncle in Scotland, the Rev. Dr. Thomas Hannon. He sent us money, and we at once went to Scotland, where we stayed until we heard our father was coming after us, when we furnished us by our uncle. Father knew that we would do anything to keep away from him, and that is why he has had us arrested."

The girls have a letter of introduction to Bishop Potter from Dr. Hannon, and unless the Bishop or some other friend intervenes in their behalf they will be sent back to Scotland.

James A. H. Bell, who had the finest private collection of books in Brooklyn, has given the entire library, containing 10,425 books, valued at $100,000, to the Brooklyn Library. With the books he has given the shelves, cases, tables and chairs which furnished his study. The books will be given a separate room in the new building.

Mr. Bell is wealthy and lives in Sands street, Brooklyn. He is eighty-three years old. While he is still hale and hearty he has provided for the transfer in his will. He is, however, anxious to see the books suitably installed in the library.

COLONEL ROWAN BACK FROM CUBA.

The Daring Officer Returns on the Orizaba, with News for Uncle Sam.

Lieutenant-Colonel Andrew S. Rowan, who has been engaged in gathering information concerning the Cuban situation for Government use, returned here yesterday on the Ward line steamship Orizaba. He was accompanied by Captain Charles F. Parker, who aided him in his mission.

The results of Lieutenant-Colonel Rowan's investigation will be submitted to Congress in December.

Lieutenant-Colonel Rowan is the officer who made the daring and hazardous trip into the interior of Cuba just after the declaration of war.

The body of Major S. B. Beebe, the American Military Commissioner who died of yellow fever in Havana on October 12, was also brought here by the Orizaba.

ATTACKED FORMER DISTRICT ATTORNEY. Mr. Ridgway Prevented a Murder and Nearly Became Would-Be Assassin's Victim.

Former District Attorney James W. Ridgway, of Brooklyn, saved a man from the fury of a would-be assassin yesterday, was attacked himself and then showed great forbearance in the Flatbush Police Court.

Caro Corrad had been arrested and released on bonds for threatening the life of James Aquarello. Yesterday Corrad again attacked Aquarello, and with an open knife in hand, chased him into Mr. Ridgway's office, in the Flatbush Building. Mr. Ridgway let Aquarello out by a side door. Then Corrad tried to stab him, but was overpowered by Mr. Ridgway's clerks. In the Police Court Corrad's bonds were made heavier, but Mr. Ridgway refused to make an additional charge against him.

Resolve Arrives with Yellow Jack. The United States steamer Resolve arrived yesterday from Havana flying the yellow fever flag. She was detained at Quarantine. She became infected with the disease at Havana, and one of her officers, Lieutenant Fred H. Pullen, of New York, died. She has been sent north so as to be in a cold climate, where the disease can be stamped out.

Children should always increase in weight. Not to grow, not to increase in flesh, belongs to old age.

Present and future health demands that this increase in weight should be steady and never failing.

To delicate children, Scott's Emulsion brings richer blood and firmer flesh. Better color comes to the cheeks and stronger muscles to the limbs. The gain in weight is substantial; it comes to stay.

I am a dentist, as you know, and have been troubled with severe headaches for about five years. I was treated by many physicians and relieved temporarily only. I saw Ripans Tabules advertised in the Philadelphia Record, and tried them. I have had no headaches since I commenced taking them, and feel much more able to do my work at the chair. I started to take the Tabules on Friday, October 22, 1897, and have taken two a day ever since.

Magistrate Wentworth Prescribes Soothing Syrup for Wealthy Broker Mills.

HE ANNOYED HIS CHARMER.

She Is Miss Emelyne H. Garraway and Preferred a Younger Suitor.

Yorkville Police Court, Oct. 18. Name of patient, E. S. Mills, Real Estate Agent, No. 479 Fifth Avenue. Disease, Unrequited love (acute). Soothing Syrup. (One teaspoonful as directed to allay spasm.) THOS. F. WENTWORTH, Magistrate.

Chapter I. "A Man Is as Old as He Feels." Any one might know from looking at him that E. S. Mills is a brave man. He is not afraid to be accused of the worst and best of all follies. His friends quote this saying of his:

"We can't all be young, but, thank heaven, we can all be foolish!" He is not young; but then he is not old. His fine, clean-shaven face is framed in yellow hair, and his eyes are deep-set, but it falls into artistic masses, with a crisp wave in it. One might take him for an abbot.

Actors strive after this type when they make up for a sympathetic part of weightier dignity and charm than the "juvenile lead." They invariably whitened their hair about the temples.

Nature has given Mr. Mills this interesting and effective "make-up." It seems a condemnation on the part of such a man to juggle in deads and lenses and mortgages and transfers, even though his clients are the rich people who live in Fifth Avenue, or would like to. One would prefer to imagine him—

But, then, Charles Lamb sat at a desk in Somerset House.

"CHAPTER II. "A Woman Is as Old as She Looks." Emelyne Garraway's worst defect is her youth. Indeed, the real estate agent with the poet's heart vows it is her only defect.

"Constancy," he says, "is a matter of experience. We cannot be harsh with children because they weary of their dolls."

They met at Hastings-on-the-Hudson, where Mills has a beautiful home. She was a guest of one of his neighbors. He saw in her one of those women whom one cannot imagine growing old. A worshipper of youth, he proposed to her, and she said "yes" with an air that overjoyed him.

No one saw any incongruity in the engagement, because Mills had the art of making himself the contemporary of a child. That he was a widower and the father of three made no difference.

Apart from all this, Mills knew how to be magnificent. He gave Miss Garraway jewels that cost many thousands of dollars. They became her very well.

It was when she returned to town that the defects of her qualities appeared. She fell in love. The chrouder might be tempted to say "She fell in love again," but Mr. Mills will not have it so. His firm lips snap a period after the "love."

Although she may not have felt any younger than Mr. Mills, he enjoyed the advantage of looking as young as he was—an advantage of fifteen years or so. He had less imagination than Mr. Mills, but just as much money, if not more. He was a Broadway merchant.

CHAPTER III. "To Be Jealous Is to Be a Boy Again."

Mills adapted himself to the situation according to a code peculiarly his own. He hugged his torment, esteeming it a thing as becoming to youth as an Elton jacket. At the height of his agony he found cause to invent the phrase that stands at the head of this chapter.

Nothing if not consistent, he exhibited his jealousy after the manner of a youth. He did absurd, exasperating things. He haunted Miss Garraway's home at No. 300 East Sixtieth street, and would allow her no peace. He concealed himself in her sitting room and in the room adjoining to luxuriate in the torture of her words of love to the merchant.

One day, when she was about to change her dress, in order to keep an appointment with a patient, she seized the waist she would have worn and tore it into tatters. She says that he seized her by the throat, but he denies this.

Then there was a mortgage transaction, which reads very like an incident of fiction written for very youthful persons. Mills held the mortgage on some property belonging to Miss Garraway. He transferred it to a friend of his, and made it appear that the price of her hand, but she had the courage of her inconsistency," he jaments, when this incident is mentioned.

Magistrate Wentworth heard the whole story yesterday. Miss Garraway, looking superb in a tailor-made dress, appeared against Mr. Mills in a sumptuous case. She wished to be protected from further annoyance. The Magistrate smiled his sympathy at her.

"It seems to me this is a case of love and the patient needs some soothing syrup," he observed, throwing into the words as much sarcasm as he could muster.

Mr. Mills promised to be good, and on that understanding the case was dismissed.

Hoffmann to Plead Self-Defence. The trial of Theodore Hoffmann, who shot and killed Patrick Roche, the union striker, last Friday, will begin on October 25.
